Approved For Release 2003/12/02: CIA-RDP75-0000 1R00010030005

NEW C.I.A. ISSUE

He is Concerned by Article Written by Agency Aide

Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, April 29-Senator J. W. Fulbright has Agency to take a look at the propriety of letting its analysts forming to official policy, present official statements and conclusions to American read-scholarship. The C.I.A. has promised him a full discussion. Mr. Fulbright, Democrat of Arkansas and chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, raised the issue in a recent letter to Adm. William F. Raborn, Director of Central Intelligence. The Senator said he was concerned about the lead of the l was concerned about the lead article in the current issue of Foreign Affairs by George A. Carver Jr.

Mr. Carver, a specialist on Mr. Carver, a specialist on Vietnam affairs, is a full-time analyst for the intelligence agency and has recently been considered for service on the White House staff. His article, "The Faceless Vietcong," was a compilation of the evidence for the Administration, acousticities. the Administration's contention that the National Liberation Front of South Vietnam is a "contrived political mechanism" of the Communist party of North Vietnames North Vietnam.

A Student and Author

He was described as a student of rollitical theory and Asian af-fairs, with degrees from Yale and Oxford, a former officer in the United States aid mission in Saigon and author of "Aesthetics and the Problem of Mean-

The C.I.A. is known to have allowed a number of its employes who have high standing in the academic world to write or even teach outside their regular working hours. Pre-sumably, they are subject to the same constraints as other Govular asked the Central Intelligence ernment officials and must have their writings approved as con-

Mr. Fulbright said it was pre-

Raborn offered to meet with him to discuss the practice and the questions it raises. The Senator said he hoped to hold the meeting soon.

Mr. Carver's article reviewed the organization of the Vict-cong and its political affiliate, the National Liberation Front, and their links to the North Vietnamese Communists.

He said his conclusion that the front had no indigenous roots and that it was subject to the ultimate control of Hanol was "not open to intellectually honest dispute."

Though many non-Communists North Vietnam.

However, the editors of Foreign Affairs, who called special attention to the article in their advance distributions to press, did not identify Mr. Carver as a Government employe.

Rindant and Author serve the front out of a sense